Claytan (Underglaze) VS Other (Onglaze)

Underglaze Decoration - Claytan Method

For underglaze Tableware, the decal is fired at high temperature on the tableware body. Then it is sealed by the glaze layer and fired again at even higher temperature. The result is the decal is permanently protected and no chance at all the color will come in contact with the food → Food safe! And as the decal will not fade, it looks as new at all time!

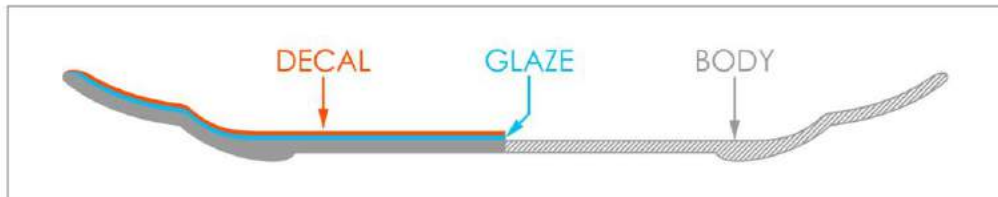

Onglaze Decoration Other Method

For onglaze tableware, the decal is fired at lower temperature on the tableware surface, therefore it is not permanent. The decal/color could be removed over some period of usage. It cause the decal will look faded. The removed decal could be swallowed into our stomach. Eating color from the decal that contains lead cadmium will be harmful to one's health.

How to test?

If you can feel the contour of the decal by finger nail on the tableware surface, then a high possibility that the decal is onglaze.

Claytan® Glazed Foot
TABLEWARE

CLAYTAN FIRING METHOD

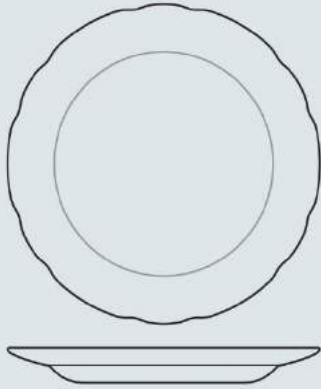

BY BRITISH "3-PIN FIRING"

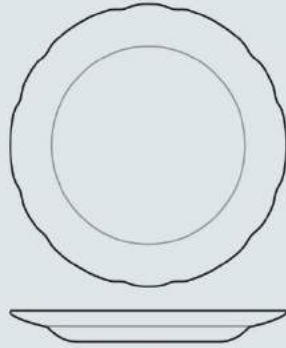

The pin marks on the bottom of Claytan ware are not defects. They are the marks of pins which are used for supporting the wares during firing.

With this unique British "3-Pin Firing" process, we are able to totally glaze the foot of our wares for smooth finishing. Smooth foot tableware will not cause expensive table surface being scratched. It will also not scratch the piece below it when stacked together.
